TO THE COLLECTOR

by the Editor

We begin the year 1963 feeling that we have ample reason for being sternly Paternal, metaphorically speaking. All our readers, with only three exceptions, have been a serious disappointment. In the Christmas Issue of the Review, for some obscure reason, the Editor made one of his Excessively Rare howling errors. In describing a Penny of Henry I, number F868, he laid the blame for the death of Thomas à Becket on the shoulders of that capable Sovereign instead of putting it where it belonged, on those of his grandson, Henry II. And what was the result? He received only two letters whereas he should have received almost three thousand letters pointing out his mistake. Formerly we had a high opinion of the numismatic and historical knowledge of our readers. Now we are not so sure. This is unnerving.

One correspondent could not resist observing, "The description is somewhat more imaginative than accurate in that it was Henry II—whose difficulties with his Archbishop are famous to this day, even on Broadway." While we don't know much about "Broadway" we certainly knew the theatrical profession had caught up with Henry II because last year the actor playing the role came in looking for a coin of that King. The palm for diplomatic finesse, however, must go to a friend of ours in Delaware who, in ordering some coins, politely inquired to which Henry F868 should be assigned, with no additional comment. None was really necessary.

It is customary in making a confession of this kind to offer an explanation. The Editor cheerfully lays the blame on the illogic of events over which he has no control. Alice-Mary has insisted on trying to improve on an already polished education and therefore is in the Galleries only part of the week. Without Alice-Mary the Editor is exposed naked to the manifold importunities of the multitude. The Christmas issue was produced under conditions of considerable harassment. The interruptions were continuous and it is a wonder the issue ever got into print at all. But in the end, we are tempted to be very ungentlemanly and blame Alice-Mary anyway. How educated can a girl get? Besides she read the proof and is seldom bashful about pointing out Editorial mistakes of judgement and fact. We can't imagine how she came to miss such a golden opportunity this time. If the coin had been Greek we certainly wouldn't have escaped unscathed.

The Galleries has had more than one occasion to be thankful for the existence of the estimable journal Coin World. Now that paper has saved the Editor the trouble of expressing his opinion in detail about some of the copies of Ancient Coins with which the manufacturers are confidently expecting to flood the collecting market. Coin World has given vigorous publicity to this new invasion of the field of Numismatics by a form of commercial activity that has nothing whatever to do with collecting. The March 1, 1963 issue, which has come to hand as we go to press, also contains the proposed T.A.M.S. (Token and Medal Society) "code of ethics on reproductions". We believe the proposed code deserves the careful attention of all Collectors. Adherence to a code of this kind by Dealers, coin publications and Collectors will prevent confusion and disappointments in the future.

The Editor's sense of humor recently saved wear and tear on his temper when he found a communication in the morning mail signed by an individual operating commercially as "Coin Reproductions". The letter, accompanied by a free sample, asked, "CAN YOU TELL THE ENCLOSED COIN IS NOT AN ORIGINAL???" Frankly, we could, but had to give high marks for a very good effort. As a matter of fact the coin was a lot better than the writer's English. Referring to an appended list of available copies he declaimed, "Until now only the wealthy had the opportunity and could afford to collect the Ancient rare coins — Remember that these are the rarest of all the Roam coins —". But he let the cat out of the bag with the sentence, "Now is the time to get in on this completely new and fabulous market of Ancient coin restrikes". We not only don't believe there is any such "fabulous market" but hope that the common sense of the Collecting Fraternity will prevent there ever being one. The manufacturers have apparently gone to the trouble of ascertaining that the U. S. Treasury doesn't object to their efforts, although why the Treasury should be interested is hard to say. Those old "Roamans" might have had different views.

This interesting letter ended by listing sets of Roman Republican and Imperial "Dinarius" and preceded the lists by the pledge, "We promise to maintain the prices regardless of how rare and expensive the coin may be." Just why the cost of a rare original should affect the cost of a copy was not explained. We are sure, though, that the promise is made in all good faith. The same can't be said for the writer's claim that the dies were produced "through the cooperation of the British Coin Museum and the Royal Numismatic Society". There is, of course, no such institution as a "British Coin Museum". We have brought this claim to the attention of the Keeper of Coins and Medals at the British Museum, who is also Secretary of the Royal Numismatic Society. His reply indicates that he is not pleased, as Coin Reproductions now knows very well. To assume that anyone could believe these distinguished organizations would support an attempt to foist pseudo numismatic rubbish of this kind on the public shows a gross underestimation of the Collector's intelligence.

It is a relief to turn our thoughts from ridiculous copies to real coins. The Galleries' first Public Auction Sale of the season will take place about the middle of May. The Sale will include a large consignment of gold, particularly strong in the English and French series. There will also be an offering of early U. S. silver coins and a large group of Hawaiian coins, with some interesting and rare patterns. The Ancient section comprises Greek and Roman silver and gold, among which will be found a set of rare Aurei of Julius Caesar.

We cannot conclude our remarks without expressing thanks to Emmeline for her help in getting this issue of the Review ready for the press. Family obligations forced her to leave us last year and we have been one armed ever since. When the crisis was upon us Emmeline found both Grandmothers were willing and eager to take the baby, leaving her free to return to her old place on the team. We have always liked Grandmothers anyway, and now have a real reason for being grateful for two special ones.

FRAUDULENT HAWAIIAN PATTERNS

by The Editor

It has been long understood in the Art World that sooner or later rare objects in limited supply will attract the attention of the forger. Of recent years the field of Numismatics has begun to be plagued by a flood of copies, "genuine reproductions" and outright fakes made with the intention of deceiving the Collector. At one time, apart from actual counterfeits, the really good fraudulent coins were generally very rare Ancient Greek and Roman pieces. Now with the development of new techniques, false modern issues in high collector demand are beginning to appear on the market. Since copying a modern coin is very difficult, particularly when there are genuine specimens available for comparison, it is not surprising that the forgers have often turned to producing fakes of pieces that never existed, which if they did exist, would be very rare. The attention of Collectors was called to a group of fakes in this category by Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Ostheimer of Philadelphia, at the recent Greater Boston Coin Convention last November. As reported in the December 7, 1962, issue of Coin World, the Ostheimers made public the preliminary results of their study of Hawaiian patterns dated 1883 struck in various metals. They produced evidence which showed that the pieces in this category had been struck over other coins of a much later date, mentioning specifically a Columbian Half Dollar. The Editor, in the exercise of his professional responsibilities, has now unearthed additional evidence reflecting on the authenticity of the Hawaiian "patterns" of King Kalakaua dated 1883 and 1884. It will be the purpose of this article to disclose the evidence and underline the only conclusions which can be reached.

Before making any specific comment about the so-called patterns themselves, a few remarks on the Hawaiian coinage are in order. The best source dealing with the origins of this coinage is to be found in two articles by Dr. Jacob Adler of the University of Hawaii, entitled, "Coinage of the Hawaiian Kingdom", contained in the February and March 1960 issues of "The Numismatist", official organ of the American Numismatic Association. The articles, based on documents in the U. S. National Archives, were a portion of Professor Adler's doctoral thesis, "Claus Spreckels, Sugar King of Hawaii". To our knowledge, Dr. Adler is the only author who has taken advantage of the primary source material dealing with the Hawaiian coinage in the Archives. He tells the story of how an Hawaiian coinage was finally achieved in spite of American financial interests opposing any maneuver on the part of the Royal Government tending to promote Hawaiian nationalism. The original dies for the coinage of 1883 were prepared in Philadelphia, and silver and copper proofs were struck. The dies were then sent to San Francisco where one million dollars in silver, in denominations of one Dollar to the Dime, was struck for circulation. Dr. Adler shows how the original plan to issue an Eighth Dollar was abandoned at the last minute when it became apparent that Hawaiian Coinage Law specified that coins should conform to the denominations issued by the United States. As a result the Eighth Dollar was struck only in proof and the Dime was substituted for it. The dies were eventually sent to Hawaii and the obverses were scored in 1888 to prevent any further use. These dies, now in the State Archives, were discovered by the author and photographed to illustrate his thesis.

The most familiar publication dealing with Hawaiian coins is "Hawaiian Coins, Tokens and Paper Money" by Gould and Bressett, published by Whitman. On page 24 of this pamphlet, Patterns for the coinage of 1883, and an alleged coinage of 1884, are listed as having been struck in gold, platinum, and other metals. The Editor checked the bibliography used by the authors and did not discover any source material which supported the existence of Patterns or Proofs having been struck in any metals other than the silver and copper Proofs of 1883 made in Philadelphia. The only evidence to substantiate the existence of these pieces is the Catalogue of the Sale of the Royal Palace Collection held in Cairo in 1954. In this Sale, Lot 110 comprised a Half, Quarter and Eighth Dollar in gold. Lots 1502, 1503 and 1504 were the same denominations in platinum. Lot 2065 included an 1884 Quarter Dollar in brass and an Eighth Dollar in nickel. It must be pointed out that this Sale, popularly known as the Farouk Sale, included a large number of forgeries and fantasy pieces struck in precious metals.

Early this year the Editor was called upon to appraise a collection of coins in an estate. There were a large number of Hawaiian pieces, including the "patterns" listed by Gould and Bressett. The Editor took immediate exception to the appearance of the gold and platinum Half Dollars, the largest pieces in the series. The estate willingly allowed him to have the coins for further examination and consideration. Without resort to a high powered glass several things were quite apparent. All the coins were struck pieces. The Half and Quarter Dollars in the precious metals were dated 1884 and were not Proofs. The Half and Quarter Dollars in silver and copper, dated 1883, were Proofs. The Eighth Dollars were all dated 1883, and struck in platinum, bronze, brass and silver on rather thick planchets. There were also 2 proof specimens of this denomination in silver and copper. When the platinum Half Dollar under study was compared with the piece illustrated in the Farouk Catalogue, it was evident that it was struck with similar dies, but was not the same coin. The careful records kept by the former owner showed that he had purchased both his Half and Quarter Dollars in gold and platinum with a Farouk pedigree in 1957. The larger pieces also had a rough surface and an uneven field. The platinum Quarter was noticeably "dished". Many of these defects are clearly shown in our plates.

We now felt we were faced with two Half Dollars in gold and platinum, and five Quarters in gold, platinum, brass, orioide and nickel, all dated 1884 and all of a possibly dubious authenticity. Careful examination of the coins under a glass disclosed that the Quarters had one distinguishing mark in common indicating they had all been struck with the same die. If the reader will examine our plate he will see two small parallel lines running to the right from the dot on the left of the date. These lines are not scratches on the coin but exist because the dies were scratched. On the Halves, the face of the King is pimpled as if the dies had been cast. The Eighth Dollars had a story to tell in their own right. Here, without question of a difference in date, it was possible to make a direct comparison with the genuine Proof specimens in silver and copper. The cutting of the figures in the dates of the "patterns" is markedly inferior to the work on the genuine pieces as the illustrations on our front cover show. The 8's and the 3's are quite different.

Gold Quarter showing die scratch mentioned in text.

At this point we concluded the coins before us were all forgeries, with the exception of the 1883 Proofs. But this conclusion provided no immediate comfort. We were in a position where we had to prove to the layman that the pieces were false. Even more important, we had to be prepared to rebut the argument that our opinion was only one man's opinion. Why couldn't a series of patterns have been made for King Kalakaua in 1884, perhaps under primitive conditions in Hawaii, using the original dies recut for that purpose, or dies made from the original dies? We also had to consider the report that some pieces examined by the Ostheimers had a Farouk Sale pedigree. Unless Hawaiian Patterns had multiplied like the Loaves and Fishes, as recorded in the Synoptic Gospels, there were more of these coins with Farouk pedigrees in Collector circulation than had been sold in the Palace Sale of 1954. Our discovery was one fraught with potentially unpleasant complications.

The dilemma was more quickly resolved than expected, when we came upon the evidence which supported our own numismatic opinion beyond any question of doubt. Rotating the gold Half Dollar one quarter turn so that the King's face pointed downwards, we discovered the date 1901 in and just above the word "Hawaii". It was preceded by a star. Just above the nape of the King's neck the letters LIB also showed up clearly.

We realized the coin had been struck over a 1901 United States Ten Dollar Gold Piece. Turning quickly to the gold Quarter we examined it, and then reversed the coin so that the King's head pointed down. There in the field, dimly but clearly, were the words IN GOD WE on a ribbon, with the shadow of an eagle's wing below. This coin had been struck on a United States Five Dollar gold piece. The weights of the coins corresponded exactly with the weights of the Eagle and Half Eagle. The chain of evidence was now complete. The gold and platinum Halves had been struck from the same die and the gold specimen was dated 1901. The gold Quarter, struck on a U. S. gold coin, had die characteristics in common with the other four Quarters. The comparison between the genuine Eighth Dollars and the four non-proof specimens showed that different and inferior dies had been used. More concentrated study will undoubtedly disclose additional significant variations. Not only were all these "patterns" fakes, but all of them had been produced certainly after 1901 and probably much later. An educated guess might lead us to conclude that they had been made after the Second World War to take advantage of reviving Collector interest in the Hawaiian series.

There now remains one loose end which needs to be tied although the implication has already been made in the previous paragraphs. We have described a group of fraudulent Hawaiian patterns, several of which have what are probably false pedigrees. Two prominent Philadelphia collectors made public their opinions about similar Hawaiian patterns in open Convention. Additional Hawaiian patterns in platinum have been brought to the attention of prominent professional numismatic experts in this area who have no commercial connections to influence their thinking. The Editor feels able to record his considered judgement that there are not, and never have been, any genuine Hawaiian Patterns of the 1883-1884 series struck in gold, platinum, nickel, brass, oroides or bronze. The silver and copper 1883 Proofs struck in Philadelphia are the only genuine Hawaiian coins of the series, apart from those struck for circulation. All the others without exception will be found to be forgeries. It is not expected that these views will be universally popular for reasons too obvious to require any comment here. If, however, an interesting controversy develops we will be glad to devote space to it in the Review.

In closing we cannot resist making some philosophical observations. This group of Hawaiian "patterns" never should have fooled anyone with an experienced numismatic eye. There is no record of their existence. The very crudity of the work should have indicated that they could not have been products of the U. S. Mint. We will refrain from speculating on where and by whom they were made. Why they were made is perfectly obvious. They were made not just in the hope of fooling the Collector, but because the enterprising manufacturer knew that there were collectors who could be fooled. In the long run the best defense against fraud of this kind is to know coins yourself and then you won't be imposed upon. The end result will be fewer forgeries.

LUX ET

VERITAS

New Light on a 1961 Inverted Date Variety

"Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof", may be a very practical piece of philosophy, but it has its limitations. The interest aroused by the Inverted Cent Date announced in our fifth issue of last year has been so great we feel unable to refrain from bringing the discovery of an unusual variety of this coin to the attention of our Numismatically minded public. We are almost required to do so in view of the fact that the variety was found up at Yale, - in the University Coin Cabinet of all places.

One of our Academic friends in New Haven wrote us to point out that the members of the Faculty are not really as much interested in anonymity as the Editor implied. Then he told us about the rare variety of our Cent he'd just discovered. We will quote him in his own words, but, on our own initiative, will refrain from using his name. We do this for the same reasons that the manufacturers of well known brands of Scotch sell their product in bulk without the brand name - at a reduced price. In any case, Professor X writes:

"Yale, which does not miss a trick, has another and doubtless even scarcer variety of your Inverted Date Cent. Ours is a product of the Denver mint where as you may have heard, a small letter D is inserted on the coin in celebration. The letter is normally found under the date on the Lincoln Cent. On the Yale specimen it occurs over the date, that is, over the inverted date, Furthermore, it is upside down. That is to say it is right side up, or would be if the date were. The date, however, being inverted, so is the mintmark in relation to it. We have thus the first known example of the Double Inverted Mintmark which, when combined with an inverted date, is an extraordinary curiosity."

So much for the new variety. Commenting on the original discovery, one correspondent observed, "it will undoubtedly be over 4000 years before such a coin is found again - the year 6009 to be exact". Another gentleman wrote, "I got a book on Yogi and tried standing on my head to see if it really was upside down. Unfortunately I fell and the date seemed to be struck sideways". But the final word comes from a friend in Wisconsin. He writes:

"In its own way the article about "the Rare 1961 Inverted Cent Date" is a modern classic and it is really not surprising that this discovery came from a Yale man. I am a Yale myself, although I'm afraid of a somewhat slower type, as I didn't catch the truly magnificent proportions and possibilities of this thing until I reached the part in the article which suggests the fabulous value that may lie in that .6488 bag. It will not surprise me to find these advertised (in pairs of course) in one of these days."

CHRONICON PRECIOSUM: or, AN ACCOUNT OF ENGLISH GOLD AND SILVER MONEY. 1745

Bishop Fleetwood's Preface to the Reader

"When I had set down, in the first Chapter, the Reason and Occasion of writing this little Book; and, in the following ones had given the Proofs of my Determination; and, in the last, had shewn the Use and Application of them, I thought I had made an End of my Business.

But the Bookseller, it seems, is of the Opinion, that I should not shew myself respectful enough to you, unless I introduced you, by the way of Preface. To comply, therefore, with his Desires, I must needs think of saying something, tho' it be but to discover some of the Imperfections of this Book.

The Chapters then, of Money, might have been much more compleat, by the Addition of 5 or 6 Plates of the several Coins we have had since the Conquest. Of the Golden Ones, I despair of ever seeing a Collection, of any tolerable Antiquity; since they who are best, as I hear, provided of these Treasures, can rise no higher than Edward III. And for my own part, I have never seen any one Piece, older than H. VI. and that was, I believe, a French one too: And I am confident, that to a common Curiosity, a Piece of Gold, older than the last Edward, will appear a very great Rarity. And yet, for full Five Hundred Years since the Conquest, one may well imagine, that most of the great Payments must have been made in Gold; since (as I think, I have made appear) for 300 Years after that Time there were no other Silver Pieces coined, than Pence, Half-Pence, and Farthings: and for 150 Years next after, there were no other than a Groat and Half Groat, Henry VII being the first that ever coin'd a Shilling, and that too at the latter End of his Reign, and but a very few of then: So that when you read . . . in ancient writers of the English Affairs, you are not to conclude that there was then any such Piece as a Shilling coined, no more than you would conclude there was such a Coin as a Pound, tho' you often meet with the word Libra. Upon the whole Matter, till about 1544, the Silver Money of England consisted of Groats, Half-Groats, Pence, Half-Pence (called, of old, Mails) and Farthings: In any, or all, of which Pieces, it must have been very troublesome to have paid 5 or 10 thousand Pounds: which makes it somewhat strange, that no more Gold of Ancient Kings should be preserved among us. But so, the Antiquaries tell us, it is with Grecian and with Roman pieces, there being 40 Medals preserved, for one Piece of Current Coin, that we can be sure of. So that the best Reason, why we have so few old Gold Coins remaining with us, seems to be, because they were (as we call them) Current, i. e. they might be easily spent.

But this, that has been said, makes it appear that a small Plate or two would hold the Coins of Silver, of 500 Years. For the Coins of W. Conq. W. II. H. I. Stephen, H. II. R. I. John, H. III. Ed. I. Ed. II. were only Pence, Half-Pence, and Farthings. The Coins of Ed. III. R. II. H. IV. H. V. H. VI. Ed. IV. R. III. were only Groats, Half-Groats, Pence, Half-Pence, and Farthings. H. VII (as is above-said) added to this Number the Shilling, which is, I believe, hard to meet with. H. VIII. added no new Species, but, in his later Life, debased all the old ones. Edward VI. debased them yet more, but in his last Year made great Amends, and added Crowns, Half-Crowns, Six-Pences, and Three-Pences (so that I have mistaken, Page 33 in saying Three-Pences were first coined by Q. Elizab.) As to the Coins of the Princes following, they have been in almost every Bodies Hands; but yet the Memory of their Weight, Fineness, and Compass, ought to be preserved to Posterity, much better than 'tis like to be. And we see the Necessity of the late new Coinage hath almost obliterated the Names of E. VI. Q. Mary I. Q. Eliz. Jac. I. and C. I. already. So that an 100 Years hence, it will be hard to know, what Sort of Money was coined by Them; which would be great Pity, since they coined excellent Money, both for Weight and Fineness, which is both to the Advantage and Honour of a Nation. This Evil, I once thought to have remedied; but the Trouble of procuring, rather than the Charge of cutting a single Piece of each Prince, since the Conquest, was, I found, too great for such a One as I am; and whoever attempts it, must be obliged to abundance of curious Persons, who have these Coins in their private Cabinets. And I here bespeak their Favour, if I should ever have Time and Power to undertake it."

GOLD AND SILVER IN THE ANCIENT WORLD

"Xenophon was contemporary with Plato, and in his account of the expedition of the younger Cyrus, against his brother Artaxerxes, he also furnishes us with particulars for ascertaining the relative value of the two precious metals. The crown of Persia was the object which Cyrus wished to obtain; and having for his purpose conducted an army through Asia Minor, he advanced to the banks of the Euphrates, and passed that river, to attack Artaxerxes. His hopes and his doubts concerning the event increased as the time of the battle appeared to draw near; and, according to the superstition of the times, he had recourse to a soothsayer to quiet his apprehensions. Being told that the king would not fight within ten days, and being under a persuasion, that, if he did not fight within that time, he would not fight at all, Cyrus promised the soothsayer ten Talents, if his prophecy proved true. On the eleventh day, after the prediction had been made, Cyrus paid the soothsayer three thousand Daricks, Persian Gold Coins; and by so doing, according to Xenophon, he fulfilled his promise. In this transaction, therefore, the fair and usual relative value of Gold to Silver was probably adhered to.

But it does not afford certain and indisputable data for estimating the relative value of Gold to Silver, and therefore, as is usual in doubtful cases, different proportions have been deduced from it. The opinion most commonly received for a considerable length of time, was, that the Darick weighed two drachms. According to this supposition, as Silanus the soothsayer received a Talent of Gold, there being 6000 drachms in a talent, and as Cyrus had promised to pay him ten talents of Silver, the value of Gold was estimated to be to that of Silver as 10 to 1.

There are good reasons, however, for doubting the accuracy of this proportion. . . . We are informed by Herodotus, that Darius the son of Hystaspes enjoined, that his subjects, who discharged the tribute imposed upon them in Silver, should pay by the weight of the Babylonian talent; and that such as discharged it in Gold, should pay by the Euboic talent. The Historian also adds, that the Babylonian talent was equal to seventy Euboic minae. If this regulation continued to be observed, and to be implied in agreements under Artaxerxes, it follows that Cyrus promised the soothsayer 700 minae of Silver, and paid him 60 minae of Gold as an equivalent; and upon this supposition the value of Gold was to that of Silver as $11\frac{2}{3}$ to 1. . . . It is highly probable, that this was the true proportional value of Gold to Silver at that time in Persia."

Charles Jenkinson, 1st Earl of Liverpool. Treatise on the Coins of the Realm in a Letter to the King. London, 1805.
